

Interview Questions for Nicole Unice

1. What motivated you to write a book equipping women to deal with their toughest issues?
2. You are described as a “Christian counselor, ministry leader and regular mom.” How does your background help you to teach and encourage women?
3. What was the greatest “Issue” that you had to overcome in your spiritual life and how did you do it?
4. In your book, you talk about “5 ½” everyday issues that hold women back and steal their joy (Control, Fear, Insecurity, Comparison, Anger and Unforgiveness). Was it hard to narrow the list to these 5 ½ issues?
5. Why are these issues so important for women to overcome in their spiritual walks?
6. In your book you say that “our ordinary issues may seem so commonplace that we stay blind to the truth of our own condition.” - Often we want people to think that we have it all together. What advice would you give to women (or anyone for that matter) to muster up the courage to accept that we have issues?
7. In your opinion, which issue is the hardest to tackle for most women?
8. You say that the “power of Christ...can transform your everyday weaknesses into your greatest strengths and gifts.” What do you mean by that? What does the process look like?
9. In She's Got Issues, you say “God isn't working in our issues to make us need Him less. He's interested in moving through our issues so that we can understand just how desperate we are for a constant inflow of his love into our hearts.” What kind of powerful changes will take place after we surrender to Him?
10. What is your hope for women who read this book?
